Description

TYPO3 has a pretty good track record in being a secure web application. That is the case not only because security related issues are handled in a profound and transparend way but also because the TYPO3 team constantly strives to imlement protection for newly discovered attack vectors that might be relevant for some (enterprise level) users.

For TYPO3 CMS 6.2 the team strives to improve some and add some security mechanisms of the TYPO3 Backend. In particular enhance the already present Cross-Site Reqest Forgery (CSRF) protection and add protection against common Click-Jacking Attacks
