| Subject: | Backend Hook "preProcess" causes JavaScript error | | |

Description

Tested with Gridelements 3.0 and Typo3 6.2:

1) Add the following hook to any content element

class DrawItem implements PageLayoutViewDrawItemHookInterface{ public function preProcess(PageLayoutView &$parentObject, &$drawItem, &$headerContent, &$itemContent, array &$row) { $headerContent = 'foo';
  }

2) Open the backand, add a gridelement and put 2 or more ContentElements in the gridelement
3) Try to move the contentelement which is inside the grid

an JavaScript error occurs

Sorry - but since $header is handled by reference, you have to take care yourself to NOT destroy it within your hook.

This is something which can't be handled by Gridelements.

Additionally this is the wrong tracker for Gridelements 2.x+ issues.

I have a related problem with v3.0 (pulled today from git master) and TYPO3 v6.2.4. I can only edit or move the first content elements in each column of a standard TYPO3 backend layout.

When disabling Grid Elements, there is no problem.

Where is the right place to post new issues for Grid Elements 3?

This is the ttacker: https://forge.typo3.org/projects/extension-gridelements2/issues

But i am pretty sure that there is something else involved, since the "can not edit first element after a Gridelements container" bug has been fixed already.
